NEW! The Neuropsychology International Fellowship Award

This award is to help to promote and support Neuropsychology in developing countries. This may be achieved in a variety of ways. Thus, it may provide for travel and accommodation costs for a neuropsychologist from a developing country to come and spend some time in Neuropsychology Departments in the UK, attend meetings, etc. Although preference would be given to scholars visiting from overseas, the scheme may also support senior neuropsychologists in the UK who, for example, wish to provide a workshop in a developing country. It may support teleconferences, for teaching or consultation purposes, between the UK and a developing country. It may support a collaborative research project between the UK and a developing country, the outcome of which might have some tangible benefit for the developing country. Two awards, each up to £500, will be made each year. This year, the deadline for proposals will be 30th April 2011. For details about the procedure and guidelines for applicants see: <http://www.the-bns.org/resources/International+Fellowship+Combined.pdf>
